A Father’s Story

Manuel is the father of 14-year-old Rashelle, who recently completed treatment for Rhabdomyosarcoma, a disease in which cancer cells form in muscle tissue. Rashelle was diagnosed in 2021 and relapsed in July 2022 after this article was written. The family lives in New York City.

“When you hear the words, ‘your daughter has cancer,’ your world turns upside down. I couldn’t believe it. After the news, the doctors gave me all that information about the illness and about the treatment. They tell you you must travel to the hospital three or four times weekly for chemotherapy, checkups, blood transfusions, etc. At home, you must pay attention to side effects or fevers. It was overwhelming.

Then, you arrive home, still in shock, looking at the mail and seeing the bills. I couldn’t sleep thinking, ‘how am I going to do this?’ I am a single father and Rashelle’s mother, Emilia, lives in the Dominican Republic. I have family in New York, but everyone is busy with their jobs and lives. Suddenly I couldn’t work anymore because the idea of leaving Rashelle alone at home or in the hospital was unimaginable.

I kept thinking, ‘how would I pay the bills if I couldn’t work? What happens to others in my situation? How do they manage?’ On top of all my worries, things are a little more complicated for me because I have hearing problems and my primary language is Spanish. I explained my situation to the hospital social worker, and she told me to call Friends of Karen because they would help me.

I was so relieved when Friends of Karen paired me with social worker Natalia, who speaks Spanish fluently. Natalia is like an angel. It is not only about the financial assistance Friends of Karen provides, but Natalia also cares and always made sure that we are okay. Natalia made sure we could speak on video calls so I could read lips and we texted every week.

From the first time we connected, Natalia made me feel comfortable. During our first video call, she reassured me that from now on Rashelle’s health will be my only concern, and Friends of Karen will help take care of the bills. When Natalia asked me to send her the bills for our rent, electricity, and cell phone, I got quiet for a minute because I got very emotional. Friends of Karen took a weight off my shoulders, and I felt relieved.

Because of Natalia’s work, Rashelle always had what she needed during her treatment, from clothes to a new bed. Natalia also ensured that Rashelle received emotional support through other programs at Friends of Karen, including one-on-one sessions with the sibling support specialist Naomi and participating in the virtual teen groups.

Without Friends of Karen, we would have lost everything I had worked for, including the apartment where Rashelle grew up. We felt safe because we knew Friends of Karen was there to help us. Natalia knew how to guide me through any question, concern, or problem; and how to find us resources. She took the time to be there for us every step of this journey.”

I have supported Friends of Karen by riding in the Journey of the Heart Bike Tour since 2013. I ride for the children, their families, and for me.

Obviously, the children and their families need all the support they can get. They are dealing with life-threatening illnesses that tear at the very fabric of their family life.

Every year, we are fortunate enough to hear firsthand from a family member of a Friends of Karen child speak at our dinners during the ride. They describe the trauma of being in that situation and the lifeline that Friends of Karen provides.

They receive support for the siblings, school supplies, medical payments, and social work for the families. They make coping with this awful situation palatable.

For me, I feel it is my duty to give back, to do something that truly matters. My reward, and it is truly a gift I give myself, is that I know I am making a difference. Also, the camaraderie that all participants share is unlike any other feeling I have ever felt. That feeling has not diminished in all the years that I have ridden for Friends of Karen.

I ride because I can and because I could not dream of missing the experience. Join us and see for yourselves!!

YOU Bring Help and Hope

Friends of Karen supports families that have a child (birth through age 21) undergoing treatment for a life-threatening illness like cancer and facing the ongoing emotional and financial repercussions of the COVID-19 pandemic. The needs of these fragile families have grown during this tumultuous period that has also seen the rise in the cost of everything from groceries to gasoline. Friends of Karen has been responding by providing a greater intensity of service, as well as extending the period of assistance to ensure the stability of families.

How is Friends of Karen able to provide these comprehensive support services for children with cancer and their families at NO cost to them?

The answer is YOU. We depend on compassionate and generous friends like you to make Friends of Karen’s assistance possible. Your contributions give us the capacity to help New York Tri-State area families with a blend of financial and emotional support so they can function and cope during this tremendously difficult time.

During Childhood Cancer Awareness Month – or at any time – please support Friends of Karen so no family will have to face their child’s life-threatening illness alone. Every dollar matters when a child has cancer.

Contributions may be made online at friendsofkaren.org or in the contribution envelope in this newsletter. Thank you for caring!
A Mother’s Story: Turning Loss into Help for Others

In 2010, Paula experienced a lifetime’s worth of loss in less than four months. First her husband Steven, a non-smoker, passed away from lung cancer. A few months later, her son Justin died unexpectedly. Then, just two weeks later, Paula’s 17-year-old daughter Adina lost a four-year battle with leukemia.

Paula faced these overwhelming losses by leaning on her trusted Friends of Karen social worker Rhonda and her family and friends. Paula knew she needed to do something positive to get through this heartbreaking time. Her good friend Sheri suggested hosting an event to keep her beloved family members’ memories alive and benefit Friends of Karen, which had been so helpful when Adina was ill.

Once she made up her mind to do an event in their honor, Paula was determined to pull off the fundraiser with just two months planning. Paula and Sheri pulled together an event at an indoor amusement center and over the years held a comedy night, dance party, and magic event all to support Friends of Karen. Since 2018, Paula and friends have sponsored a 5K Walk in the Park (see details in box on this page).

Not only was she motivated by honoring her family, but Paula was fueled by her drive to ensure Friends of Karen could help other children like Adina and Justin and other parents like her. She and Sheri went to every business owner they knew in Westchester County and New York City and created a Facebook page to ask for support of their new effort, which they dubbed Adina’s Angels.

Paula recalls that she found Friends of Karen on her own and with the first call found a very different response from other places she called to help her with the issues surrounding Adina’s cancer.

“It was 2008, and Adina was getting a transplant and my husband was sick,” Paula noted. “I didn’t need financial help, but I needed help to get through all this. I reached Rhonda at Friends of Karen and she was the first person that immediately said, ‘this is what we will do.’ She helped me through all the obstacles we faced, including helping me get a second opinion for Adina.”

Paula remembered that Rhonda even helped with small things that made a difference for the family. She brought Adina gifts for Hannukah, her birthday and just because; visited Steven; and helped Justin through some obstacles.

“Friends of Karen was my go-to place, and they never said no – Friends of Karen was always by my side,” Paula said. “Now it feels good to help the organization from my heart so that it helps others and keeps my children’s and husband’s memories alive.”

The impact of the emotional and practical support the family received was deep and Paula remained connected to Friends of Karen. Rhonda and Paula spoke periodically after Adina passed away, so Rhonda thought of Paula as the perfect person to come to a Friends of Karen’s Board of Directors meeting to speak about her experiences and what families need from the organization.

“I remember the Board asked what I thought would be helpful to families with ill children,” Paula said. “I said ‘If they had more sibling support for Justin, he might have dealt better with his dad’s and sister’s illnesses.’”

That clarity was one of the reasons the fundraising proceeds of Adina’s Angels support the now expanded Sibling Support Program. Today, the program is delivered by four creative arts therapists and child-life specialists who provide both one-on-one sessions and group activities targeted to siblings, ill children, and parents. Adina’s Angels has also thrived and the group has raised more than half a million dollars cumulatively since 2010 for sibling support and other assistance for children and their families. Paula sums up her fundraising success with Friends of Karen as “a great relationship that really works, but I am a cheerleader who is only as good as the marching band.”

Marisa and Arlene, two Friends of Karen Board Members

Marisa’s Story

“Thirty-two years ago, the day before my 16th birthday, our lives changed forever when my sister Erika was diagnosed with Acute Lymphoblastic Leukemia (ALL) at the age of 13. Our life was a rollercoaster ride for two and a half years with daily visits to the hospital for chemo treatments, checkups, and lots of visits to the emergency room.

Fortunately, our mom was introduced to Friends of Karen and all their wonderful resources. Not only did Friends of Karen assist my mom financially, but they also provided her with a supportive social worker who was able to gently guide her through the nuances associated with a life-threatening cancer diagnosis for her child.

I am happy to report that my “little” sister is now 45 years old, a cancer survivor and thriver, and founder/CEO of The Brain Bodega, an online tutoring and mentoring company which focuses on critically ill children.

As the sibling of a cancer survivor, I am inspired every day by her journey and strength. Inspiring others and being able to pay it forward have become a priority in my life. As a result, I chose to pivot my career and now work by Erika’s side as her COO and as an Academic Mentor for some of our remarkable students. I have also come full circle, 31 years later, as a proud board member for Friends of Karen. There is no better feeling than sitting in a board meeting, or on a bike in FoK’s Journey of the Heart ride, knowing firsthand that your decisions and actions are impacting the lives of children, their siblings, and their families each and every day.”

Arlene’s Story

“Growing up as a teenager with a younger brother Ben who battled leukemia, I had many questions and concerns. My family did not have access to the holistic support that Friends of Karen is able to provide as we didn’t live in the New York area. When I first discovered Friends of Karen, I thought about how different our family’s experience could have been. Having the opportunity to serve as a board member now is truly rewarding as I witness the powerful impact that Friends of Karen has on its children and families.”

Finding Strength in Asking for Help

Queens, New York mother Stacey shares the many ways Friends of Karen helped her family. Her son Stephen, 12, is under treatment for the extremely rare Inflammatory Myofibroblastic Tumor.

“When we first learned Stephen had cancer, I feared whether he would make it and what would happen if he did not. My husband Sudesh and I always thought of ourselves as independent and self-sufficient. We taught Stephen and his older sisters Sarah and Kimberly to get back up if you get knocked down.

When Stephen was diagnosed, it was difficult for us because his tumor was a rare one. First, it took a long time to really understand what was going on with his illness. Then, everything was going along smoothly, and I thought we were managing well. We are grateful to have close family and friends that helped us with whatever we needed.

When the pandemic hit, it made things much harder. That’s when things hit rock bottom. My husband is a woodworking joiner and jobs were hard to come by for a while. Our finances were getting tight, as relatives also lost work because of the pandemic and could no longer help us. Then, Sarah was selected out of 60 students to start a combined high school and junior college program. We were so proud, but we did not have the money to buy the program supplies and a computer printer she needed.

I remembered that the hospital social worker had given me some places to call for help, but I had not needed it before. I prayed on who to call first and I swallowed my pride and called Friends of Karen. I was surprised how fast the social worker Rhonda called. All I was focused on then was getting help to pay for Sarah’s school supplies, but Rhonda took the time to ask questions to see how we were coping.

Rhonda helped Sarah get the school supplies, but she kept in touch and always wanted to make sure we were adjusting and coping, which was something we did not expect. The warmth Rhonda showed us was different from other experiences we had and that really touched me, especially her concern for Stephen and his siblings’ well-being. She even arranged for Sarah to get some spending money so she could get food while she spent long days in her advanced program at school.

“Friends of Karen has been there for us, we really appreciate that everyone looked after us as people.”

Rhonda encouraged Stephen and Sarah to join Friends of Karen’s weekly Having Fun virtual group, and for Stephen to join the peer support group for ill children. Both have been helped by working with Friends of Karen sibling support specialist Naomi in group and one-on-one sessions.

Along with the many ways Friends of Karen has been there for us, we really appreciate that everyone looked after us as people. The love and support we gained by this helped us feel normal during a time when nothing is normal.”

Why I Choose To Give and Not Receive

“I choose to give the gift of happiness, compassion, and love to others that are in need. During a time of illness of a child, the last thing a family needs to worry about are the basics: food, shelter, and transportation. Spending time with the child that is living with cancer is all that a family member should have in mind.

During the year I give a monthly monetary donation to Friends of Karen, in memory of my nephew David. On my birthday to celebrate his life and all that Friends of Karen did for him and his family, I ask my friends to donate to Friends of Karen in lieu of gifts. I feel it is always better to give than receive. I hope this will inspire others to do the same.”

– Janice Williams
